

Pursue
what matters

At St. Norbert College, you'll explore what interests you ... what moves you ... what excites you.

You'll live and learn with purpose. You'll grow in mind, heart and spirit.

You'll learn — constantly, inside and outside of the classroom. About your chosen field, but also about the world, and about yourself.

You'll pursue what matters.

Pursue knowledge

Here, you can study what you're passionate about. With more than 80 programs of study extending across the humanities, arts and sciences, we offer remarkably diverse opportunities to satisfy your interests. And if you're not sure what those are yet, you'll find our academic programs structured to reward exploration: Deciding on a major is something you'll have plenty of time to do at St. Norbert.

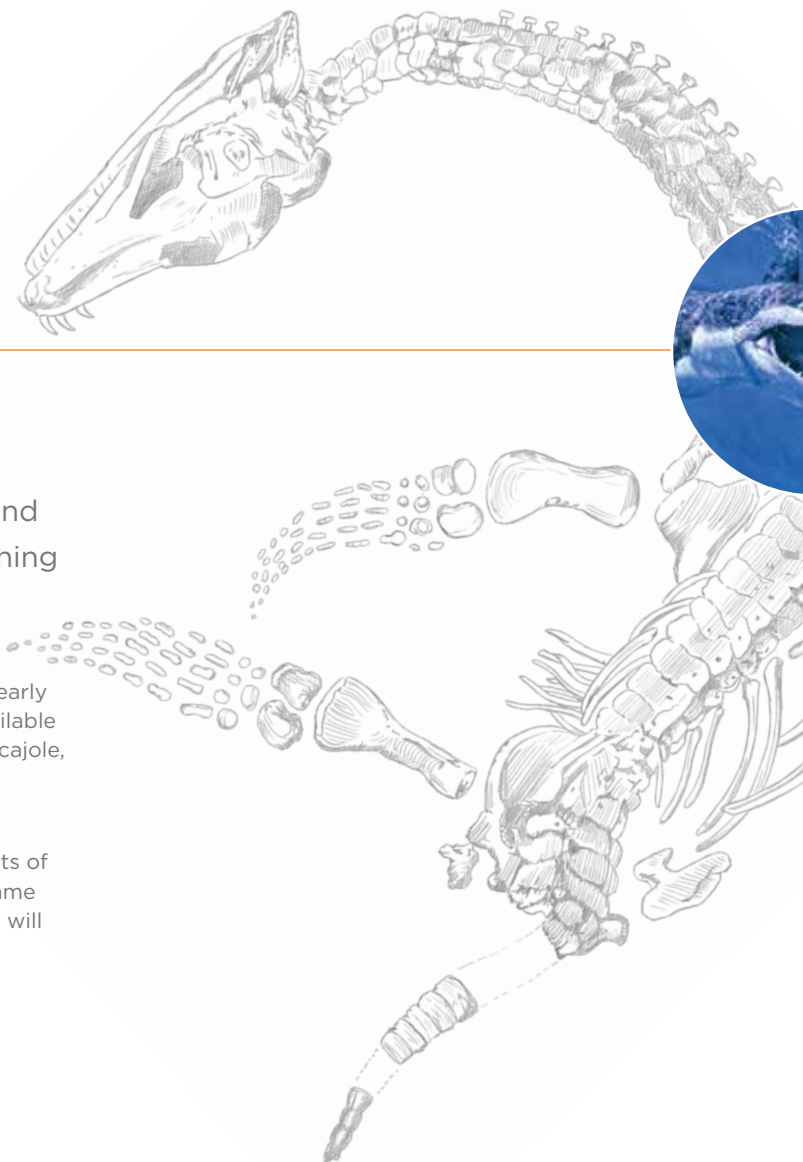

As broad as our academic offerings are, you'll be equally impressed with how you learn them — and from whom.

Learning is holistic at St. Norbert, meaning it happens everywhere — inside and outside the classroom, in books and in the field, through lectures and research, in ways expected and unexpected. That kind of holistic experience lies at the very heart of the liberal arts education we provide.

Guiding you on your journey will be extraordinary faculty, distinguished in their scholarship but equally passionate about teaching. They'll be with you in the classroom, where you'll receive an uncommon degree of personal attention (our student-faculty ratio is a mere 13-to-1). They'll be with you outside the classroom, as well: They'll greet you by name as you cross the quad; they'll mentor you in the collaborative research programs that are among the hallmarks of our college (you can participate as early as your first year); they'll be available to clarify, to guide, to coax and cajole, and just to chat over coffee.

Ask virtually any SNC graduate about the most impactful aspects of their college careers, and the name of a professor or two — or six — will inevitably arise.

Hunting plesiosaurs

Becky McKean (Geology) is a fossil hunter — and a successful one. She's unearthed plesiosaurs in Utah, and has invited students to collaborate in her research — some traveling to dig sites to collect data, others helping prepare fossils in the lab on the SNC campus. Professor McKean's passion for providing research opportunities to students stems from her own undergraduate experience at St. Norbert. Such opportunities abound at SNC — in all disciplines.

An A+ for the teacher

"Professor Anderson was wonderful. I was a teaching assistant for a couple of years. She became a great resource not only for school but personally. Her passion for teaching her students was something I'd never seen before. You could just tell how excited she was in the lab and the classroom."

Pursue a career

What do you want to do with your life? Not a simple question, and we don't expect you to arrive at college with the answer. One of the best things about an SNC education is that it exposes you to so many new ideas, you may end up with a career passion you never knew you had. We'll help you discover your calling in life and give you the skills, knowledge — and résumé — to go after it.

We'll counsel you — from before your first-year classes even start. We'll explain how to stay on track for graduation. Guide you toward internships. Show you what it takes to get into grad school. (Hint: collaborative research — you can do a ton of it here — and faculty support, which you'll have in spades.)

We're good at this work. Within a year of graduation, 96 percent of our graduating students are employed or in grad school.

Changing his tune

"I started as a history major. My high school band director was very interested in getting me to major in music. But history seemed like a more broad opportunity. My second week of school, Professor Rosewall found me and introduced himself. He said my music teacher told him I was coming. Later he took me aside again and said he noticed that I spent more time in the music building than any other building on campus. He got me thinking that music was my passion."

Pursue friendships

Arrive as strangers ... leave as lifelong friends. There may be no greater joy at college than forming bonds that will last a lifetime.

Classmates. Roommates. Study partners. People you binge-watch with ... get coffee with ... meet for lunch ... hitch a ride to the mall with.

It's easy to build relationships like these at SNC. Unlike mega-universities, our campus is more of a town than a city. (Granted, a very exciting, dynamic town!) So you're not just a face in the crowd here, you're part of the fabric of our community. People know your name; they greet you with a smile. And they make your time here unforgettable.

Roommates. Teammates. Best friends.

Cara Donegan '21 is from Orland Park near Chicago; Anna Tristani '21 is from Green Bay. The Bears fan and Packers fan (you can guess which is which) were strangers when they arrived with the rest of the first-year soccer players. Four years later, they were still teammates - but also best friends and housemates. Now graduates, they can look forward to what so many other alumni do - the lifelong bonds of friendship formed at SNC.

Pursue your interests

There's a lot to savor in life. If you agree, this is the perfect place for you. We have 100+ student organizations. So you can continue (or discover) your passion for knitting. Or radio. Or French. Or ballroom dancing. Or trapshooting. While we don't have a chess club, we do have a cheese club (this is Wisconsin). And if you really want to be in a chess club, you can start one — or any other club: We'll make it easy. You can do what you love here, whatever that is.

Perhaps you're a performer at heart. SNC has a remarkable number of bands, choirs, theatre groups and other platforms for you. The stage is yours!

You'll find lecture series to fuel your left brain, and art galleries to satisfy your right. Concerts. Theatre performances. Study abroad. Student government. Greek groups. And within all of these pursuits, ample opportunities to develop skills like leadership, teamwork and planning.

Bottom line: We're going to present you with as many opportunities as we can to live the fullest life you can.

Why cool

What's a cheese-loving girl to do when she finds herself away at college? For Sirina Tyler '22 (right), the answer was obvious ... start a cheese club. With advice and encouragement (and funding!) from the folks in our leadership and student engagement office, Sirina and a few close friends launched the SNCheese Club in Fall 2019. They already claim more than a dozen enthusiastic members. These turophiles (yes, that's the word for cheese-lovers) split their time between connoisseurship and the kind of service activities that are part of all our student organizations.

Pursue fun

If you think “fun” isn’t something that matters, try not having any.

There’s not much danger of that at St. Norbert. We know there is a time to study, but also a time to, well ... not.

Fall semester kicks off with a celebration. We punctuate the end of the school year with a celebration. In between, we have a few celebrations. There are concerts. Performers of all kinds. Places on and off campus to gather with friends for coffee, food and conversation. Docks down by the river, and a BYOH station, too (that’s “Bring

Your Own Hammock”). Legit extracurricular pastimes like volleyball and quirky ones like spikeball. And the kind of random fun that smart, resourceful college students are so good at dreaming up on the fly: pie-in-the-face fundraising challenges ... cannonball contests ... tennis-ball golf.

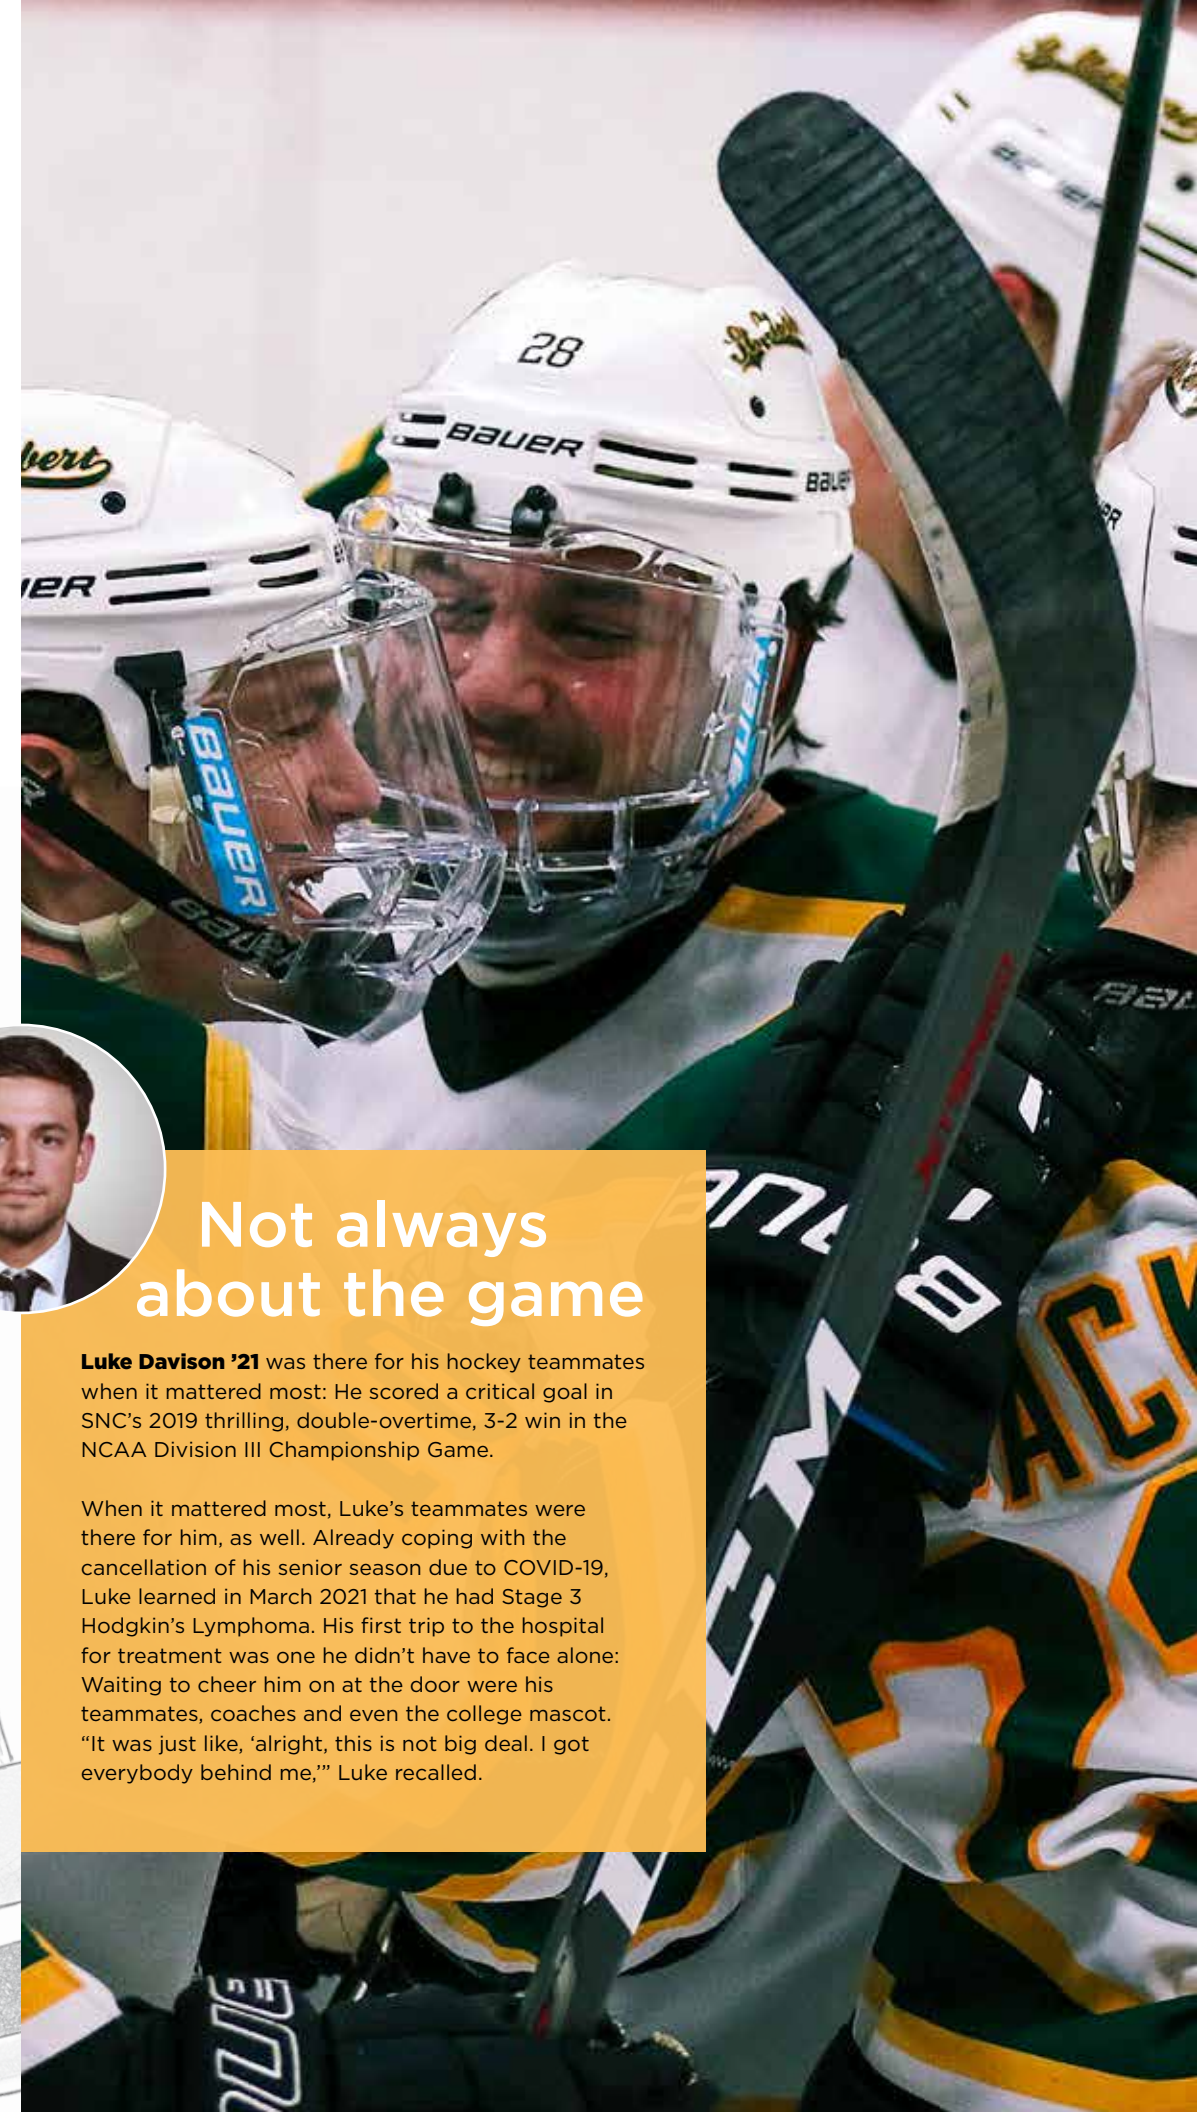

Life at college should be joyous: Agreed?

Taking one for the (hospital) team

The men of Tau Kappa Epsilon wanted to do some fundraising at SNC Day, our annual campus-wide open house. “Let’s have people throw pies at us for money” was the idea that prevailed. Results: 500+ pies tossed, $500+ raised for St. Jude Children’s Research Hospital, and countless Instagram posts.

Pursue athletics

Since our varsity men's basketball team first took the court more than a century ago, athletics have been integral to life at St. Norbert. Roughly one-quarter of our students — more than 500 — participate in 23 varsity sports, with many more in intramurals, and an entire campus engaged in cheering on their efforts.

You'll discover a tradition of excellence here. We boast more than 150 conference championships across all sports, as well as five Division III national championships.

That excellence extends to the classroom: St. Norbert has more student-athletes earning conference all-academic recognition than any other school in our conference — by a wide margin. We've produced more than our share of Academic All-Americans, as well: 76 and counting.

Big wins and good grades aren't all you'll experience as a St. Norbert athlete: You'll gain an ever-deeper appreciation for integrity, commitment, sacrifice and teamwork — the things that stay with you long after the final whistle.

Not always about the game

Luke Davison '21 was there for his hockey teammates when it mattered most: He scored a critical goal in SNC's 2019 thrilling, double-overtime, 3-2 win in the NCAA Division III Championship Game.

When it mattered most, Luke's teammates were there for him, as well. Already coping with the cancellation of his senior season due to COVID-19, Luke learned in March 2021 that he had Stage 3 Hodgkin's Lymphoma. His first trip to the hospital for treatment was one he didn't have to face alone: Waiting to cheer him on at the door were his teammates, coaches and even the college mascot. "It was just like, 'alright, this is not big deal. I got everybody behind me,'" Luke recalled.

Pursue the greater good

Believe in making the world a better place? So do we.

SNC students are passionate about service: They devote an astounding 18,000 hours a year to it. They lift others up in so many ways: volunteer teaching; working in shelters and pantries; raising money; raising vegetables; raising awareness. Many take part in the TRIPS program — an alternative way to spend a winter or spring break that focuses on the needs of others. You'll even find service integrated into your academic work — doing economic-impact studies for local nonprofits, perhaps, or testing water quality in the Fox River.

In fact, we have an entire center (the Sturzl Center) focused on supporting this service work. We have an entire center (the Norman Miller Center) dedicated to peace and justice. And our acclaimed Cassandra Voss Center for issues of gender and identity is breaking new ground in pursuit of a more equitable society.

This all fits nicely into our mission as a Catholic, Norbertine institution — to help build a world in which all can flourish. Our students are all in on that.

Never too busy

Katelyn Holmstrom '23 is a double-major in sociology and communication and media studies. She's also on the swimming and diving team, is a member of the Student Government Association and mentors other students. That's the very definition of a full plate.

But it's not so full that Katelyn hasn't been able to build a truly astonishing amount of service into her college years. Among other on-campus and off-campus organizations, she has volunteered with Into the Streets, Golden House, Pinky Swear Foundation and MLK Day. And with Cancer is Messy, De Pere Christian Outreach and various canned food drives. And at Lambeau Field, Syble Hopp School, Ronald McDonald House, the SNC Parish and more. All of it done with a giving spirit and a servant's heart.

Pursue community

You'll develop a sense of community here — not just in the local, campus sense, but in the global sense. Together we'll strive to better understand our place in the world and our responsibility to it.

You'll experience this focus on community through an education that embraces diversity, welcomes dialogue and encourages you to engage others with respect. We stand up for one another here; we support each other.

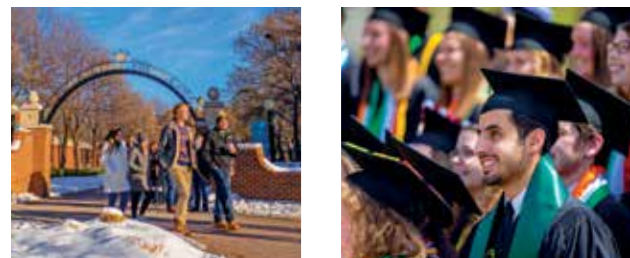

You'll be part of an energetic and inclusive student body; you'll experience the world through study-abroad and service programs; you'll hear important voices — sometimes seldom-heard ones — invited to campus. You'll help build a culture that celebrates our differences and rejoices in our commonalities.

Being heard

Ruthie Tucker '22 is a Native American student at St. Norbert, first in her family to attend college. When she discovered there wasn't an organization for indigenous people on campus, Ruthie did what so many of our students are inspired to do — she took action to make things better. And so, in her sophomore year, Ruthie founded the Council of Indigenous People on campus. With a generous spirit and an eagerness for dialogue, she is working to bring greater understanding of Native American cultures and issues to the college community.

Pursue value

What will you invest ... and what will you get in return?

At St. Norbert, our tuition, room and board costs compare favorably to our peers in the top tier of liberal arts colleges. In addition, we offer merit scholarships that reward your academic excellence, as well as need-based scholarships and other forms of financial aid. In fact, 97 percent of our students receive some form of financial aid. Simply in terms of costs, a St. Norbert education is competitive not only with other private colleges, but most public ones, as well.

You also need to look beyond cost, to value. Our four-year graduation rate is among the best in the Midwest. (At public universities, students take 5½ years to graduate, on average.)

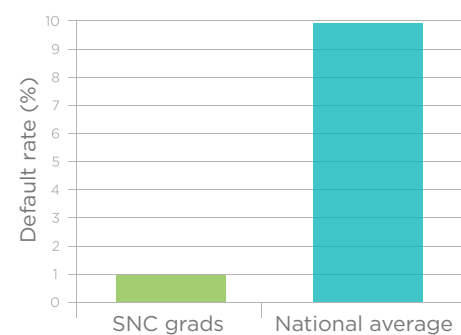

Consider the extra costs in tuition, housing, etc., required for that.)

We also offer a four-year guarantee that provides an extra measure of financial protection. If you need more time to graduate, through no fault of your own, we'll cover the tuition costs.

Getting your degree faster means you'll be out into the workplace faster than your peers, getting a head start on career success. And we'll have you well-prepared for that success: In our last survey, 96 percent of respondents said they were in the workforce or grad school within one year of graduation.

In summary: SNC works to keep your costs down through generous financial aid and on-time graduation. And the quality of the education you'll receive here is such that you'll find many doors open once you cross the stage at graduation. That's value, plain and simple.

College-graduate loan default rate

Our grads pay their loans because they graduate with good jobs and manageable debt.

Seizing his opportunity

Jonathan Contreras '22 of Milwaukee chose St. Norbert over schools much closer to home — public and private. St. Norbert scholarships meant that the costs were roughly the same, freeing Jonathan to choose a college based on what he valued — a school big enough to stand with any in terms of opportunity, and small enough to allow for one-on-one attention from professors. Now the first-generation college student is thriving at the school of his dreams.

Pursue meaning

“The two most important days in your life are the day you are born and the day you find out why.”

We couldn't agree more with Mark Twain. Accordingly, throughout your time at St. Norbert, we will support you on the journey to discern your values and choose a path in life that is guided by them.

We're not here to tell you what to believe or what your principles should be. But we are here to help you think about those things, carefully. To encourage and empower you to find truth and meaning and purpose in your life. It really is the driving force behind our college — helping you get to know your world and yourself. One telling sign that we're serious about this: We have a number of quiet, inviting reflection lounges around campus. Because we know you'll have a lot to think about.

Amazing Grace

Grace Brick '21 was inspired by the youth ministers she encountered in high school, but a mission trip she took with YouthWorks in the summer of 2019 before her junior year at SNC is what convinced her that ministry was her true calling. Grace spent her remaining time in college preparing for that vocation: co-chairing the OUTLOUD ministry of St. Norbert Parish that welcomes and supports marginalized people, serving as a member of the Chiara Catholic women's group at SNC, and engaging in service opportunities wherever she sensed a need. Not long before graduation, Grace — who had fallen in love with Kentucky while visiting her grandparents — learned that she had been accepted as the new director of faith formation at St. Edward Catholic Church in Jeffersontown in the Bluegrass State.

What will you pursue?

College is your opportunity to learn all you can ... to do all you want ... to dream, to discover and to decide.

At St. Norbert College, it's not a journey you'll take alone. We'll support you at every step.

We'll educate you in ways both broad and deep. We'll help you know your values and live according to them. And we'll help you appreciate both the joys and responsibilities of belonging to a community.

We'll help you pursue what matters.
